Hydrangea French Bolero

Hot on the heels of award winning Hydrangea 'Runaway Bride', this brand new variety shares many of its best characteristics! Flowers are borne along the length of each stem, bursting from strong lateral buds to create the most free-flowering display you've ever seen! Hydrangea 'French Bolero' is a modern hybrid of 2 species, H. scandens and H. macrophylla - and just like its second parent, the blooms are large, changing colour with the acidity of the soil. In alkaline soils the blooms are pink, while acid soil will produce shades of purple and blue. With a compact, spreading habit, this deciduous shrub is perfect for lightly shaded borders, and makes an elegant patio plant. Height and spread: 100cm (39').

Strawberry Just Add Cream

A compact plant producing masses of pretty pink flowers and few runners in favour of more fruit - up to 1kg per plant. Early to fruit, this attractive ornamental strawberry will keep cropping until the first hard frosts of autumn, but the key difference with any strawberry currently on the market is the unique flavour. It combines the sweetness of home-grown strawberries with the special taste of the wild woodland or alpine strawberry. The flavour is stronger and more stable over the season than varieties with a similar aroma note, like 'Mara des Bois' and 'Charlotte'. Looks stunning cascading from hanging baskets and patio pots. Height: 30cm (12"). Spread: 50cm (20").

Prunus (Ornamental Cherry)

Kojo no mai

This popular Fuji Cherry bursts into life in early spring when much of the garden is still dormant, with a flamboyant show of delicate white blossoms tinted with pink. The pretty blooms are highly attractive to bees and an important source of early nectar. Unlike the more familiar cherry trees Cherry Kojo-no-mai forms a neat, compact shrub which is ideal for small or low-maintenance gardens. Come autumn, the leaves of this RHS AGM variety turn to fiery shades of orange and red giving a long season of interest.

Magnolia stellata

This classic, deciduous magnolia has a slow growing, compact habit that is well suited to smaller gardens. The silky buds of the Star Magnolia open to reveal exquisite, pristine-white blooms in early spring. Its lightly scented flowers are borne in profusion, covering the naked branches in a flurry of petals over several weeks. As spring progresses, Magnolia stellata becomes cloaked with a dense covering of attractive mid-green leaves. This modestly proportioned shrub makes a superb specimen plant for a sheltered border or large container. Height: 3m (10'). Spread: 4m (12').

Polemonium Golden Feathers

A real showstopper with its gorgeously variegated foliage and spring lilac blooms. The golden edges to the foliage really allow the spring flowers to stand out, it even catches the eye when there are no flowers. Prefers full sun or partial shade, it is quite hardy and will thrive in fertile, well-drained soil. It is also low maintenance and only requires cutting back the foliage at the end of the season and dead heading any dying blooms. Height 50cm (20") and spread 40cm (16").

KB9861	1 x 9cm Potted Plant	£10.99 £9.99
KB9961	2 x 9cm Potted Plants	£24.99 £17.99

Mahonia Soft Caress

The first of its kind to have entirely spine free foliage, making it much more agreeable in the garden. Winner of "Plant of the Year" at RHS Chelsea Flower Show 2013, this superb evergreen shrub has a useful autumn flowering period. Fragrant spikes of golden blooms give way to spherical, blue berries that will attract birds to the garden during the winter months. This compact and resilient shrub makes a useful addition to borders and containers for plenty of year round interest. Height and spread: 120cm (47").

Sarcococca confusa

The flowers of Sarcococca confusa might be inconspicuous, and hide beneath the leathery foliage, but you won't miss their powerful, honey-like fragrance. The flowers are followed by black berries, which stay on the plant for a long time. Christmas Box is a versatile, evergreen shrub that needs little maintenance and can tolerate many different garden situations, especially difficult areas such as dry shade. A useful plant for shady borders or growing in large containers near to the home, where the fragrance can be enjoyed. Height: 2m (6.6'). Spread: 1m (39")

Hibiscus Woodbridge (Standard)

This deciduous shrub comes into flower when others are looking tired, featuring large, trumpet-shaped deep-pink flowers of 8cm (3in) across, with red centres from late summer to mid-autumn. The upright branches bear handsome, three lobed, dark-green leaves with an exotic feel to the entire plant, but is just at home in a herbaceous border as it is in a tropical-style garden. We recommend planting in full sun. Height & Spread: 2.5m (8').

Viburnum bodnantense Dawn

In the depths of winter, this hardy, deciduous shrub bursts into life producing masses of richly perfumed blooms on bare, woody stems. The dark pink flowers fade slowly to white before giving way to small, rounded, purple berries in summer. By autumn, the green foliage of Viburnum x bodnantense 'Dawn' transforms to a vibrant cloak of orange and yellow, in one final display before the winter returns. This superb RHS AGM variety has a particularly long season of interest, making it an excellent choice for prominent borders and wildlife gardens. Height: 3m (10'). Spread: 2m (8').

Gardenia Narcissi Love gardenias? Then these are the perfect bulbs for you!

Gardenia Narcissus is so named due to its resemblance to gardenias and we've picked these three varieties due to their delightful fragrance and their big velvety-soft double blooms, which are packed with rows of petals and frills. Flowering from March-April, Gardenia Narcissus make beautiful cut flowers - they can also be forced indoors for winter blooms - but, as with all double narcissi, don't cut them before they are fully open. HBb. Height: 40cm (16in). Flowers: Mar - Apr. Sun or Part Shade.

Compost & Composting

Hotbin Composter

HotBin is a 200 litre hot composting bin that is easy to use. It quickly transforms kitchen waste and plate scrapings (including meat and fish), grass cuttings and leaves into nutritious compost. The insulated walls and effective aeration allow high temperatures to be reached and sustained, which means that food waste can be successfully sanitised and composted, without unpleasant smells.

Dimensions: 200ltr: 1145 x 550 x 625mm; 100ltr: 1150 x 450 x 450mm. Complete with thermometer, raking stick, wood chip bulking agent, "kick start" bottle, full instructions.

For full delivery details see page 46.

Moorland Gold Compost

Moorland Gold growing mediums are made from a natural occurring peat product, collected through water filtration as a result of natural erosion with man playing no part in its formation. When it rains, particles of peat and leaf mould are naturally washed into streams and rivers, which are deposited into lakes and dams. These particles are collected and processed to produce a fine, dark medium that has all the benefits of commercially dug peat and much more besides.

Moorland Gold organic composts are made by blending the naturally occurring peat product with organic nutrients; they have a variety of uses, from general gardening to specialized growing mediums. These natural composts are rich in minerals and trace elements, which encourages the growth of strong and healthy plants, with the reduced need for additional feeding.

For full delivery details see page 46.
